Togo Handmade Collection

Since 2007, the Togo Collection has been part of FLAMANT's range, offering handmade rattan pieces that reflect tradition, skill, and sustainability. Each item in this collection has a unique story, woven by skilled artisans in Myanmar, bringing a touch of the world into your home.

A Tradition Woven by Hand

The Togo collection is made by expert weavers in rural Myanmar, where weaving is more than just a job, it is a skill passed down through generations. In farming areas around Yangon, seasonal work is common, but rattan weaving provides a stable income for many families.

These talented artisans weave, frame, sand, and varnish each piece with great care, making every item not just useful but also beautiful.

Did you know?

- ▶ Rectangular items are the hardest to make because framers must carefully shape the corners before weaving starts.
- ▶ Round baskets are easier to make and are often woven in the evenings as a family activity.
- ▶ Each year, the February-March bean harvest interrupts many weavers' work, and some choose not to come back, causing this craft to dwindle even more.

Slow Design: The Art of Patience

Making a Togo item takes time, following the principles of slow design. The process begins with selecting the best liana from tropical rattan, which is cut to the right size. A frame is then shaped to ensure accurate dimensions.

Once woven, each item is carefully sanded to create a smooth finish. A protective varnish and hand-painted details are added, followed by a final quality check.

“The whole process from the tree to the basket takes several weeks”

Sustainability & Ethical Craftsmanship

At FLAMANT, we are committed to preserving traditional craftsmanship while ensuring ethical and sustainable practices. Our partnerships go beyond business: we actively support fair working conditions, sustainable production, and the communities that keep this craft alive.

By choosing Togo, you are not just bringing home a beautiful item, but also contributing to the well-being of artisans and their families.
